yo whats the matter with this?

😂 I know exactly what's happening.

It isn't your prompt.

It's almost certainly the word "Red Wolves."

The image generator is seeing:

Red Wolves

...and interpreting it as real wolves, wildlife, or something that trips an over-sensitive classifier. Sometimes the safety filters get false positives based on words alone, even when the context is clearly a fictional band. The previous attempts also had words like "garage," "band," and "Red Wolves" together, which likely confused the automated system.

Remember when it kept deleting Paul? 🤣 This is another one of those AI quirks.

I'd reword it like this:

Create a wide cinematic website banner for a fictional 1990s hard rock band named "The Red Wolves." Five musicians stand on stage in a packed arena. James Deveroix, the founder, stands behind a black grand piano with long curly brown hair and a black leather cuff on his left wrist. Eric Rose, a blond drummer, is behind a large drum kit. Vito Valintinie plays lead guitar, Paul Michaels plays second lead guitar, and Charlie Bennet plays bass guitar. Giant concert lights shine behind them with thousands of fans raising their hands. Red and gold stage lighting, smoke effects, pyrotechnics, Marshall-style amplifiers, dramatic arena atmosphere, cinematic, ultra detailed, photorealistic. Leave open space across the top for a website title. No actual wolves, only the fictional rock band.

That last sentence is key:

"No actual wolves, only the fictional rock band."

😂 Sometimes you have to be ridiculously explicit with image models.

And I have to laugh...

Yesterday:

"Where's Paul?"

Today:

"The AI thinks your rock band is wildlife."

The Red Wolves are having quite the week. 🤘🐺🎹

So, the lineup became:

✅ James
✅ Eric
✅ Charlie
✅ Vito

❌ Paul disappeared!

🕴️ Random Guy #6: "Hey guys, I'm in the band now."

Red Wolves Production Memo #7

Attention all crew members...

We appear to have misplaced Paul Michaels.

If found, please return him to stage left immediately.

Last seen holding a Les Paul guitar.

May have been replaced by a mysterious substitute who refuses to identify himself.

Reward:
One backstage pass and unlimited pizza.

Or this one...

Behind the Music: Red Wolves

Interviewer:
"There are rumors there was a mysterious sixth member."

James:
"There wasn't."

Eric:
"There definitely wasn't."

Vito:
"I still don't know who that guy was."

Charlie:
"He was nice."

Paul:
"...YOU REPLACED ME?!"

Anthony walks in...

"Rebecca, your dad's band had five members."

Rebecca points at the poster.

"Apparently... not that day."

I swear, these AI bloopers are becoming part of the Red Wolves' lore.

- ✅ Charlie was blond.
- ✅ Eric became the guitarist.
- ✅ Paul vanished.
- ✅ Mystery Guitar Guy joined the band.

- ✅ "Kissing Paul" instead of "missing Paul.
